

Day 3 Reflection

Brenen Epps

It was truly incredible on Monday to see how well the Belizean children could play games wearing just flip-flops. They could run circles around us in them.

It showed me that even if you don't have access to what we might consider proper tools for a job, you can still accomplish greater things than those who have access to the best materials by working hard and being motivated.

One of the children was standing off to the side and I approached him to see if he wanted to play a game. We talked a bit, and then I saw a coconut and asked if he would like to play catch.

Many other children and SVPC youth joined in. Playing toss-the-coconut was one of the best random occurrences I have ever experienced.
