

UNITED METHODIST MEN SCHOLARSHIP

This scholarship process is perhaps different from any other in which you may participate. It's very informal, requires as much or as little time and information about yourself as you decide, and is reviewed by an anonymous panel of five men. Unless there are extraordinary circumstances, there are no personal interviews. How you prepare this application will have a great deal of influence on how the application is considered. Keep in mind that the evaluators will be working from a copy that will have only an identification code. They will not know who the applicant is.

You may choose to submit only the forms included here, or to supplement them with additional documents. Remember that this is your only opportunity to sell yourself. Consider submitting supporting items such as school records, awards, personal recommendations, employer comments, or any type of information that you feel might be relevant in the evaluation.

Each evaluator will apply his own measure of importance to the various information elements submitted. There are no strict rules or guidelines that they must follow. Some may consider academics to be the most important element, while others may attach more value to other aspects such as church or community and school activities or financial need. It's up to them. They vote independently, and may not even know who the other members of the committee are. This is done to avoid any conflicts and undue duress or influence.

There will be two scholarships: one to a graduating high school senior, another to a current higher education under-graduate student. There is a possibility that one or more additional scholarships could be awarded, depending on amount of funds available. The scholarship is open to anyone attending any higher education institution, including community colleges and trade schools. It is limited to undergraduates only, no advanced degrees.

Remember the deadline! It can sneak up on you. The application can be submitted at any time. You need not wait until the last minute. The deadline for 2022 is Sunday, May 8. Late applications will not be considered. For 2022, application evaluations will begin immediately after the cutoff date.
