WAITING

As I am writing this article, I am waiting for the arrival of our new granddaughter. Brook is scheduled for today (Monday) to give birth to our new grand baby. All is well and we expect everything to go smoothly. Hopefully, we will have pictures on Facebook by tonight. Thank you Jesus.

Now, for those not on Facebook, let me update you. I have been running a contest to help us name this new granddaughter. The prize included a trip to Starbucks...or my new favorite, The Single Smile Café in Summerville. Here were the simple rules: Use any form of my name, Thomas Arthur Brown, to come up with a cute girl name...and you win. I suggested "Tommi." My friend, I think my friend, Tim Whitfield, suggested Thomasina Artimus. OK, that is definitely not a contender. If you are stumped, you can use Janie Marlene, the grandmother, but that only gets you a small cup of coffee as a prize.

As you might guess, this unofficial name contest does not have the approval of the parents. Small matter. I am hunting for the official copy of the Grandparents Rights and Privileges Handbook as we speak. I am almost certain there is something mentioned in there about grandparents...grandfathers...naming the offspring. I choose to ignore the chapter that says the grandparents are to be patted lovingly on the head, smiled at compassionately, then sent off to the Cracker Barrel for lunch.

Brook will be delivering at St Francis. My daughter Erin, a labor and delivery nurse at Roper, will be in with her and Jerry. (Janie and I will be seated outside in the grandparents "You Don't Get To Be In Here" waiting room. Another grandparents rule book check!). My mother retired from St. Francis as a labor and delivery nurse. I believe she will be watching from the gallery in heaven, but I do wish she were here for the ringside seat.

We are a blessed people. God is good, all the time, and all the time.....

See you Sunday. Maybe I will have a picture or two!

JIBC Food Pantry

The need for food is still very much in demand for those less fortunate. We are running VERY low in our Pantry.

Although there are many canned vegetables, other essentials are lacking: Peanut butter, jelly, one-can meals (beef stew, corned beef hash, chili, spaghetti and meatballs).

If you can help out with any of these items, please bring them to the church office.
