From the Pastor

2008 is dawning. A new year always offers a new beginning and an opportunity to evaluate, make plans, and resolve to do better than last year.

Many stores take inventory at this time of the year. In fact, many close their doors for a day or two so they can "take stock" of their inventory.

It may not be a bad idea for a Christian. As we end one year and embark upon another, we should take an inventory of our spiritual stock. Are we attending church as we should? Are we reading our Bibles every day? Is our prayer life all that it should be?

Someone once made this observation: What would happen to my church if everyone in it was just like me? Would it be forced to close its doors? Would it be a dry spiritual wasteland? Would anyone be visited, encouraged, witnessed to?

These are sobering questions. It is time for all of us to ask, am I am "committed Christian" or am I just "playing church"? What God does in 2008 may well rest on the way these questions are answered.
