From the Pastor

This week we celebrated President's Day, a combination holiday that has incorporated Lincoln's birthday and Washington's birthday into one. It reminds us of the importance of the presidency and the awesome responsibility we have to elect someone to that lofty office.

We go to the polls again this year to elect a new president. As Christians, we will want to select someone who shares our values. Every believer should pray about his choice and investigate the character and stance of each candidate.

Other people will go into the same polling places and choose a person who shares their agenda. It is vitally important that every Christian should involve himself in the selection process and ask God to guide him.

Some presidents have been good ones; others have been weak and destructive. Their impact has been felt for years. Just like the kings in the Old Testament, some leaders have been good and some bad.

The Bible tells us to honor our leaders and pray for them. In the meantime, we should select our leaders well.

From the Minister of Students

Jesse Powers has done a wonderful job each Sunday night of opening my eyes and giving me a better understanding of what the Bible says about prayer and how to apply it in my life. I want to thank him for his ministry and his willingness to share his knowledge and expertise with our church.

A quote given by Jesse last night has stuck with me and I would like to share it with you, "Worship flows from love, if we love little, we will worship little."

Think about that for a while and be honest with yourself. If our worship is a barometer of our love for Christ, the question becomes; how deep is your love? It does affect your prayer life.
