

Francis Marion University

Title II Report

In 1998, the US Congress passed legislation, Title II, Section 207, of the Higher Education Act (HEA), that required all states and institutions that have teacher preparation programs to submit annual reports on teacher preparation and licensing beginning in 2001. The institutional reports released July 1, 2003 include information about the pass rates of students on tests required for state certification, the number of students in the program, and the institution's accreditation status, among other information.

The Francis Marion University report shows 100% of its students passed the PRAXIS II: Learning & Knowledge Test (K – 6) and the PRAXIS II: Specialty Area Tests.

Dr. Marjorie Pace, Dean of the School of Education at Francis Marion University, attributes the School's success rate to a strong faculty and a recently nationally accredited curriculum (National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education).
